GOOD GRUB AND PLENTY OF IT!
AT THE
Bennett House,
SALEM, OREGON.
L. JAY S. TURNEY,

HAVING LEASED THE ABOVE NAMED HOTEL, is prepared to accommodate the traveling public and OWN HOUSEHOLD REGULAR BOARDERS, in as good style as any House on the Coast. He has determined to make the Bennett as good as the best and better than any public house in Salem. He will soon complete some important improvements which will add greatly to its appearance and comfort, and intends to merit and hopes to receive his share of patronage.
He has secured the services of Charley (known to be the best cook in Salem and one of the best in the whole country) and other competent persons to manage the culinary department, and is resolved to set as good a table as can be found anywhere—not in clap trap, pomp and show, flummery and fine furniture, but in an abundant supply of the very best the market affords.
His Bar room will be kept warmed and lighted, and well supplied with newspapers, periodicals and other suitable reading matter, and kept in a manner which will make it an agreeable resort.
In short, he intends making an effort to please ALL who stop at the BENNETT HOUSE. And he most respectfully requests his friends everywhere to give the old and well known stand at least one more trial before concluding they can do as well elsewhere, and promises if they are not well treated and properly cared for, and at reasonable figures, it will not be the fault of the public's most obedient and most humble servant.

This question [illegible] off last winter [illegible] to encourage the building of rival lines against the existing monopoly and the fight this winter will be directly to reform the existing management or demolish it. The press embroglio will hasten the early solution of this question.

The Diplomatic Correspondence

The diplomatic correspondence with France concerning Maximilian has been furnished to the Committee of Foreign Affairs of both Senate and House entire, but only a portion has been published. It appears however from Minister Bigelow's dispatches, that he (Bigelow) was informed by Marquis de Moustier on the 11th of October that his Majesty desired to withdraw the troops from Mexico as soon as practicable without reference to the period fixed if shorter time would suffice, and on the [illegible] day Bigelow was informed by Perrier of the [illegible] of steamships that the contract had been finally signed to bring the French troops home in March. Bigelow adds: I have reason to think Perrier was instructed to make his communication to me. Minister Campbell's instructions were written October 20th and he sailed November 9th. His instructions are lengthy. He is informed that our Government puts faith in the French promise for withdrawal of troops and (he) Campbell will find a portion of the French army already gone, thus producing a crisis at this time. It was expected Gen Grant would accompany Campbell, but as that proved to be inconsistent, Sherman was substituted.

OUR SAN FRANCISCO DISPATCH.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec 10—About 2 o'clock this morning the dead body of Samuel Brown, a colored man, was found lying on the sidewalk on Brenham Place, in front of the West End Hotel. About half an hour previous Brown and a man named George Stanton, but better known as Cock Eye, had angry words on Pike street. Both parties were in liquor. The disturbance was quelled by the interference of bystanders without serious results. Soon after they left and proceeded down Clay street together. Shortly after a person came to officer Rogers and informed him that the dead body of a colored man had been found in Brenham Place, and upon going there he recognized the body as that of Brown. Cock Eye was arrested and is now confined in the station house. The coroner will make a post mortem examination this evening. Stanton alias Cock Eye is about thirty years of age and is described as a little more rough. He has been an active worker about the polls on election days, and is not known in this community.

Wm R Satterlee, Registry clerk of the 12th District Court, died at his residence yesterday afternoon of typhoid fever. Mr S had been a deputy in the county clerk's office for the past eleven years. He was a prominent member of the Odd Fellows and an officer of the Good Templars.

The Pacific Mail steamer Montana sailed for Panama this morning with 283 passengers and $768,000 treasure.

Chas F Johnson, one of the proprietors and founders of the Morning Call, died at his residence in this city yesterday at the age of 35 years. Mr J. was a native of Philadelphia and a pioneer of California.

Judge Baldwin of Nevada is expected to arrive here in a few days and hold the U S Circuit Court.

Wm Verney was severely, and it is feared fatally, injured yesterday by the attack of a vicious horse, who kicked and bit him in a terrible manner, fracturing his jaw and inflicting severe internal injuries.

The steamer Geo. S. Wright with Col Buckely and staff arrived to-day from Victoria. With the exception of the bark Golden Gate all the Russian telegraph fleet is now in our harbor. Col Buckley reports everything progressing favorably. Owing to the winter weather setting in at such an early period, in a great measure the work of construction had been suspended sooner than was anticipated. Some 2,000 miles of poles have thus far been erected both in Asia and America, and the exploring parties are out making arrangements for a prompt and vigorous resumption of trade in the spring. It is supposed that the bark Golden Gate has been frozen in at the Arcadian river, as cold weather comes so quick and without warning that it was almost impossible for her to have got away. She is the store ship of the expedition. She has plenty of provisions and her crew are perfectly safe, though the position may be a cold one. The fleet will remain in this harbor during the winter.

Mr Joyce and Jon. D Cushing were discharged from their debts to-day by a decree of the county court.

Markets

Flour—Sales quite limited; the local trade has also been gradually dropping off of late; prices however have undergone no change. [illegible] sks @ [illegible] $6 25 [illegible] sks $6 75@7.

Wheat—Holders say it is impossible to sell at any price. We quote the range at $1 85@1 90 for good to choice milling.

Barley—Fair feed 90c ⅌ 100lbs.

Gold in New York on Saturday dropped to 137, closing however at 134½.

Legal tenders are a little better, broker's quoting the price at 71½ buying and 72½ selling.

Arrived—Dec 10, ship King Fisher, 125 days from New York.

Sailed—Dec 9, bark Nahumkeag, Puget Sound. Dec 9, Prussian ship Derflcag, Melbourne.

The Galveston Bulletin of October 24th contains the following:

Had the victorious party come with fierce exactions would not the South have complied? How much rather therefore comply with this amendment in which there is no banishment, no confiscation, no punishment—no "indemnity for the past," only "security for the future." The wisest statesmen of the South recognize these facts, and are coming to the conclusion to do the best they can and not give the Stevens Sumner faction opportunity to exact still heavier penalties. After the adoption of this amendment there is only one more requisite to representation. The election of men who were loyal all through the war. This must be done as it was in Tennessee. Congress will run no risks at present. In a few years when the excitement of the past and present have subsided, when there is nothing to fear, Congress will remove the restriction, and any man, even Mr Davis, may be elected to Congress. "An ounce of prevention is better than a pound of cure," says the proverb. Will it not be far better to take away the now only cause of difference than in the future to attempt its cure after more bickering and further strife has been engendered?

A GOOD DEMOCRATIC APPOINTMENT.—The Woodland News says:

It is said that the Hon John Morrissey (M C elect from New York) favors the appointment of John C Heenan as Minister to the Court of St James to succeed Adams. Morrissey, it is said, will bet $20,000 in gold that Heenan will compel the payment of the Alabama claims, or whip the whole British cabinet from Lord Derby down in less than sixty days from the date of appointment.

WILL RESIGN.—There is a report, based upon recently written private letters, that General Grant, in view of the President's threat to disregard Congress and set up one of his own, and on hearing that he really intended to do this, directed the President, if he had any such purpose, to accept his resignation, as he could obey no military order looking to such a consummation.

President Johnson and the New Orleans Massacre

[From the Portland Daily News, October 26th.]

Johnson has not only failed to recommend his reconstruction policy to the people of the Northern States, but he has been exceedingly unfortunate in that policy itself. The New Orleans riots of the 30th of July directed universal attention to the character of the reconstructed Governments of the Southern States, and the foolish efforts of Johnson and his friends to lay the blame of those riots on the Radicals of the North rendered a full and complete inquiry into them absolutely needful. So loud and persistent were the charges brought against the Radicals, and so pertinaciously did Johnson's organs call them the "Radical riots," that public opinion was at first inclined to cast some blame upon the Republican party for the provocation to riot it was supposed to have given. General Sheridan's dispatches however did much to remove the feeling, and when it was discovered that those dispatches had been garbled at Washington, and that a passage directly charging upon Mayor Monroe the instigation of the riots were suppressed, Johnson's supporters were obliged to change their tone to one of apology, and the suspicions they had endeavored to cast on their opponents fell back on themselves. From that time there has been but little doubt as to the responsibility of Johnson's policy, if not of his Government, for the events of that disgraceful and disastrous day. General Sheridan, in the suppressed portion of his dispatch, described it as not a riot, but a massacre by the Mayor and his police. Yet even so late as the 5th of December, the President distinctly and repeatedly asserted, in his speech at St. Louis, that the riot was planned in the North; that the present "radical Congress" was at the bottom of it, and that "every drop of blood that was shed rests upon their skirts, and they are responsible for it." Three days before those words were spoken the Military Commission which had been appointed to investigate the affair had completed its labors, and sent the result of them to Washington in an able and strongly worded report. The first thing which Johnson must have found on his return from a tour in which he had everywhere charged the massacre on the sufferers and their friends, was this report distinctly tracing it to his own nominees. But he made no sign of change of opinion or policy. He had ostentatiously patronized the "constituted authorities" of New Orleans, and had identified himself with them, and here was an authoritative and official report distinctly laying the guilt of an organized and premeditated massacre on those authorities, and not only justifying all that General Sheridan had said about them a month before, but proving even greater guilt than Sheridan had suspected. The date of this report is September 5th, and it was not till October 3d, three days before the election in Pennsylvania, that the New York Tribune succeeded in procuring a copy of it and giving it to the public. For nearly a month it was suppressed, although, so far as we can see, no advantage whatever resulted from the suppression. Johnson's cause was lost without this authoritative exposure of the results of his policy, and the keeping back of this report only exhibits him in the attitude of standing by his friends at the very time when the character of those friends is seen in the most disastrous light. By attempting to screen the New Orleans "authorities," Johnson has brought upon himself a share of the blame, and on his policy all the condemnation that is cast on them. The very fact that in the face of such accumulated evidence Johnson charges Congress with the responsibility, makes his reluctance to publish the evidence only the more condemnatory to himself. Sumner, of course, throws back the charge and declares, that the whole responsibility of the massacre lies at Johnson's door, and Johnson, by his unwise and bigotted adherence to a policy which has failed, and to the men who have abused his confidence, invites a hostile verdict from the public. He set the example of recrimination, and has now given his opponents a splendid opportunity to follow it.

They have but to print his speeches side by side with the report of his own Commissioners, and, from the comparison between them, the conclusion naturally and irresistibly follows that Johnson charged his opponents with the crime in order to shield his own guilty friends. He has thus identified himself with such men as Mayor Monroe in the South, just as he has with Clymer and Hoffman in the North, and the people judge him by the company he keeps. They are condemning his policy not for his usurpation of powers unknown to the Constitution, nor for his mere desire of infringe on the prerogatives of Congress—these things might have alarmed the statesman, but might not have roused the people. But this patronage of men who are avowed enemies of the Union, this fraternization with men capable of planning and carrying out the massacre of their political opponents, has stirred the feelings of the people and roused their indignation as no mere constitutional encroachments could. Johnson's friends have so industriously sown the wind that both he and they may have to reap the whirlwind.

A PARAGRAPH UPON SPINSTERS.—The other evening, when all under my roof tree had gone to bed but myself, and while I sat dozing in my arm chair now and then dipping into De Quincey's paper on Wordsworth which lay open before me, I came upon a passage in which the writer, taking the bard's sister and companion for an illustration, defends the choice and dignifies the lot of these rare women, who rather than marry for the mere sake of being married dare to live alone and devote themselves to the happiness of others. It is so seldom one hears a good word on behalf of what the world calls "old maids," that I am tempted to reproduce De Quincey's generous and philosophic plea in favor of their unappreciated vocation. And I am the more moved to this from a lurking partiality to these self sacrificing sisters, and because the truth of what he says I have seen and still see within the range of my acquaintance. But here it is:

A much larger number of voices would proclaim to have been unfortunate in life, because she made no marriage connection, and certainly the insipid as well as the unfeeling ridicule which descends so plentifully from vulgar minds upon those women who perhaps from strength of character, have refused to make such a connection where it promised little of elevated happiness, does make the state of single blessedness somewhat of a trial to the patience of many, and to many the cruelty of this trial has proved a snare for beguiling them of their honorable resolutions. Doubtless the most elevated form and the most impassioned, of human happiness cannot be had out of marriage, but as the opportunities are rare in which all the conditions concur for such connections, how important it is that the dignity of noble minded (and in the lowest case, of firm minded) women should be upheld by society in the honorable election they make of a self-dependent state of virgin seclusion in preference to a heartless marriage. Such women, as Mrs Trollope justly remarks, fill a place in society which in their default could not be supplied, and are disposable for duties requiring a tenderness and a punctuality that could not be hoped from women preoccupied with household or maternal claims.

Hitherto the Protestant world, impelled by the spirit of the reaction against celibacy and conventional life, which was so prominent a feature and force of the Reformation, has denied these women any proper sphere in society, or sufficient means of action to make their lives what they ought and might be. With a few favorably situated exceptions, they have been compelled to be content to settle down here and there as obscure appendages to other households, and submit to be regarded and treated as persons who had missed their vocation and were wearing out their lives on sufferance and without hope or aim. But thanks to the new order of "The Sisters of Mercy" lately organized in the East under the auspices of Bishop Potter, this state of things bids fair to change for the better.—Portland Cor. S. F. Bulletin.

NORTHERN MAGNANIMITY.—The New York Commercial Advertiser pointedly says that when Wade Hampton, John Forsyth, Governors Marvin, Humphrey and Sharkey prate about "Northern treachery," "public faith," "broken pledges," and want of generosity, they should remember that each and every one of them live, move and have their being only through an unparalleled display of magnanimity on the part of the North.

The Boston Traveler says of Mr Seward: "He belongs to that order of New York politicians of whom Aaron Burr was the first, Martin Van Buren the most contemptible, Henry J. Raymond the smallest, and William H. Seward the worst."

The Turkish Power

The New York World thus discourses upon this subject:

Wherever European force and enterprise are asserted there the Turks dwindle and submit. In the province of Adana, M. Langlois found a "colony of factories"—factories of cotton, of oil of sesame, of linen prints and leather, which was a law unto itself and had practically conquered the territory it occupied. In Moldo-Wallachia, or "Roumania," as the Danubian Principalities since their union have named themselves, the energy of the inhabitants, seconded by the policy and forecast of France and of Prussia, has established a virtually independent monarchy of the Roumain race. The blue, red and yellow flag of Roumania flies over a territory nearly twice as large as Bavaria and over a population larger than that of Belgium. Prince Charles of Hohenzollern, a kinsman both of the Prussian King and the French Emperor, elected to the sovereignty of Roumania at the outbreak of the late German war, was dispatched by Napoleon to take possession of his crown, carpet bag in hand, while Russia and Turkey were parleying and protesting over his election. His presence at the head of such a people, while it is a threatening if not an insurmountable barrier to the advance of Russia, offers also a rallying point for the Christians of the northern provinces of Turkey in Europe, and puts quite on one side the Hellenic dreams of a new Byzantine empire. In Thrace, Epirus, Thessaly, Macedonia, Crete, Rhodes, there are ample elements of aggregating about the existing Greek monarchy force enough to make it a respectable and practicable as for fifty years it has been a disreputable and ridiculous experiment. Whether Constantinople should become Greek or Roumanian, whether the Greeks and Roumanians should unite in a confederation with Constantinople for their Capital, whether Constantinople should be erected into a free city under the protection of the Great Powers, these are all questions which there will be abundance of time to discuss when the turban disappears from the Bosphorus and the corked hat takes its place. That the time for that disappearance is close at hand cannot, we think, be doubtful. It may be precipitated by the intrigues of Russia, in which case it will certainly bring down sudden and terrible calamities upon Europe, with no great probability of securing to the Russians any permanent gain either of territory or influence, and with great probabilities of loss to them in both respects. It may be delayed by the intrigues of Prussia, Austria and Italy, all of them deeply interested to adjourn a little longer the grand setting day.

But be it a little sooner or a little later it is close at hand, for the reasons which made Turkey a tolerated Power have, one by one, given way with the triumphant emancipation of Europe from the principles and the policy of 1815. And it may well be that before the close of the current century we shall find the tides of emigration from Central and Western Europe, which have set so strongly for fifty years toward the New World, flowing westward as strongly, and carrying not only into the European provinces of Turky but into the magnificent regions of Asia Minor and Syria the life of a new civilization, more opulent even and more brilliant than that over the ruins of which for centuries the Dead Sea waves of the Ottoman sway have rolled.

Where Labor Pays

The laborer of America, unlike the laborer of the Old World, may by industrious exertion, easily secure a competence and even become a capitalist. His labor, intelligently and efficiently directed, will procure for him much more than a mere provision for the passing day. He may if he will, make constant accumulations of capital and find investments for it that will yield him continually increasing profits. In no part of the world can a place be found which holds out better hopes to the willing laborer than these western portions of the United States. It may be doubted whether there is any other region where, as a general rule, the gains of labor are so much in excess of the necessary cost of subsistence. But as money has been easy to obtain here, so its value has been lightly estimated. With the facilities that are here offered for accumulating wealth, the economy that is practised in other places where money is harder to obtain, would, if practised here, make the laboring classes of this country the wealthiest in the world. Labor and capital here do not form distinct classes. Here any poor man may hope to become rich. Nay, he may look forward with certainty to an improved condition of life. It used to be supposed that there was a natural antagonism between labor and capital,—and this feeling of hostility may still exist in those countries where the idea prevails that workingmen and their employers are distinct classes,—but such an idea has no existence here, nor can it be said to prevail in any part of the United States to the extent that it has prevailed in England. Laboringmen here are independent, they know that they can amass wealth, they are sensible that a very little exertion will suffice to provide them with the means of living. Now if the people of this country, profiting by their fortunate situation, would add to the natural advantages which they possess, the industry, enterprise and economy that others practice, this region would grow in wealth and power at a rate which has never been equalled. In the same degree that labor is made efficient capital increases, and we can hope for great and permanent additions to the capital of the country only by additions to its laboring force. The greater portion of the future wealth of the State must be created here, it cannot be brought from abroad.

Faults in the Internal Revenue Law.

There has justly been much complaint and dissatisfaction throughout the country in regard to the uncertainty of the construction that is given to portions of the Internal Revenue Law. Decisions and counter-decisions on controverted points have frequently been furnished, yet without settling matters to the satisfaction of tax payers. Part of this difficulty may be owing to the loose and uncertain wording of portions of the Revenue Act, and part of it to the arbitrary decisions of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue. All this has been a source of much perplexity and trouble, and of no little expense to persons interested in knowing precisely what the law is and in complying with it. The inconvenience felt is so general as to call for a remedy from Congress. The law should be made clear and specific, and capable of but one interpretation. The San Francisco Alta notices an instance where the meaning of the law is in dispute, and which may be taken as an example of many other cases of the kind. Before the law was amended last July, the tax on ground coffee was one and one-fifth cents per pound. The amended law was intended to reduce the tax to one cent per pound, but the section is somewhat ambiguously worded, and the Commissioner decides that the coffee when roasted and sold before grinding is liable to a tax of one cent, and that when coffee is roasted and ground before being sold, the tax is two cents per pound. This ruling is evidently contrary to the intent of the law. The object of Congress was to reduce the tax on manufactured articles, and not to increase it. It is to be hoped that all errors of this kind will speedily be corrected by such emendations of the Internal Revenue Act as experience has shown to be necessary.

Mr. Lincoln was for immediate restoration on no other conditions than a resumption by the seceding States of their practical relations with the Union, by a renewal of their allegiance.—Herald

If it is granted that this assertion is true, will the fugacious felon explain why he so bitterly opposed Mr Lincoln's policy from the beginning of his first term down to the day of his death? And further, if it is true, will he explain why he continues to revile the memory of Mr Lincoln and to heap reproaches on his name even now, after his body has long since turned to dust? The fact that every Copperhead and every rebel in the land opposed Mr. Lincoln and takes sides with Mr. Johnson, speaks more eloquently and conclusively on this subject than all the sophistical arguments that were ever invented to prove that Johnson is following in the footsteps of his lamented predecessor.

Yearly Gross Products of the Union.—The following figures approximately illustrate the relative value, estimated in specie, of the various industrial interests of the United States, as ascertained by recent inquiry at the Bureau of Statistics, Treasury Department:

Agricultural and forest products	$1,700,000,000
Manufactures	950,000,000
Mineral products	75,000,000
Fisheries	13,000,000
Profits from foreign commerce, imports and exports	100,000,000
Earnings from domestic commerce, coastwise, inland and local	1,500,000,000
Average yearly increase in value of domain, roads, canals, dwellings, &c	2,400,000,000
Total	$6,858,000,000
Yearly consumption	6,000,000,000
Savings, or net increase of wealth	858,000,000

The Government at Washington has determined to perpetuate the last resting place of our brave soldiers to the utmost extent possible, the War Department has called for 476,000 iron head blocks for the National Cemeteries. Each head block is to be nine inches wide by twelve inches long, with an inscription of the name, rank, regiment, arm, company and corps of the sleeper beneath, with the date of his death.

The Albany Democrat says it is claimed by those who personally know A. Johnson "that he has much of the bull dog in his composition." We suspect the Democrat's information is not quite accurate. From the continual barking and snarling which the person mentioned has kept up ever since January last, it is evident that there is in his composition much more of the cur than the bull dog.

The Sacramento Union, speaking of the rejected terms of Congress says: "Should the South still continue to clothe herself in the panoply of insolence and obstinacy which has hitherto been her distinguishing garb, it is to be hoped that her punishment by reduction to a Territorial condition or otherwise, will possess the efficiency requisite to produce a change in spirit and a reform in action, and be commensurate with her deserts."

A Washington dispatch of the 5th inst., says that Bingham of Ohio emphatically denies the truth of the statement which has been extensively published that he was preparing articles of impeachment against the President on the ground of complicity in the assassination of President Lincoln. He never had such an idea.

A Kentucky View of the President's Duty.—The Frankfort (Ky.) Commonwealth has the following sensible comments on the duty of the President at the present crisis.

INDIAN DEPREDATIONS

On Saturday last, as Messrs. R. Hall, J. C. Adams and Frank McCoy were on the summit of the divide between Snake River and Reynolds Creek, about one o'clock in the afternoon, each with a team loaded with flour for this place, they were suddenly fired upon by Indians from behind rocks. Mr. McCoy was instantly killed, Adams was shot through the right hand and Hall was untouched. Hall and Adams made their escape into the rocks while the savages tore up and destroyed 2,650 pounds of flour, cut up several setts of harness, beat the skull of their victim in with rocks and made their escape with twelve head of animals—eleven mules and the bell mare. Levi Maize came along on horseback during the time and fired three times at the Indians, which doubtless hastened their retreat. Mr. Hall had a rifle but his ammunition was in the forward wagon, and he was behind, where he could not get at it. Hall only saw three or four Indians, while Maize says he saw eleven and that they fired at him several times. McCoy leaves a family in Walla Walla. Those teams and loads were the property of R. Hall, the animals being worth about three thousand dollars and the property destroyed a thousand more.

We are informed by Mr. Reed of Maj. Walker's command that the Indians fired on the Owyhee ferry a few nights since, killing one horse, and another night attacked a detachment of cavalry encamped at the Sheep Ranch, exchanging a few shots with the guard and attempting to run off the horses, in all of which they failed.

James Gitt and W. H. Frasier were out hunting and prospecting last week to the south of Catharine Creek, and when encamped in a canyon one night, a band of some seven to ten head of cattle were driven by within half a mile of their camp apparently by two Indians, as only two pony tracks were visible. The cattle tracks were very large, came from the direction of Catharine Creek and went towards South Mountain.

One week ago last night a band of Indians visited Sinker Creek and drove off fourteen head of horses, and wounded others by shooting them with arrows. Mr. Grenzebach offered to equip and pay eight men, at his own expense, to pursue them, if other cattle owners, butchers, etc., would assist, but no movement has been made to second the enterprise; consequently the freebooters are permitted to go unmolested and to enjoy their gains in peace.

MINING ITEMS.

The Webfoot mill has been engaged off and on for several weeks in prospecting ledges for different parties. A sample of several tons from the Noonday gave satisfactory results, but the most encouraging test was that of the Woodstock—of which we had something to say weeks ago. The proprietors have constantly worked on the ledge, and have had quite a large batch of the ore crushed at the above mill—resulting in a handsome dividend all round. Another installment of ore will soon be reduced, when we may be permitted to give some figures. The boys owning the ledge are of the numerous class in the mines who are generally richer in prospect than in pocket, but they have good reason to believe that they have struck it and immensely rich.

The Whisky Gulch Ledge is being constantly worked upon and is gradually developing into a large and very well defined interest. The indications that it will hold its own in the mill are equally flattering—more especially as the ledge is sounded in depth.

Ford's Theater—The Scene of President Lincoln's Assassination

For several months the Quartermaster's Department has been engaged in fitting up the building formerly known as Ford's Theater, and it is now being rapidly prepared for use as the office of the Surgeon General, the records of which office will, it is thought, be removed there on the 1st of November. It will be recollected that the first work done on the building, when the Government decided to lease or purchase it, was to place three floors in it and make it fire-proof. This was done by placing iron beams in it, resting on columns, and springing arches for the floors. In the center of the building, on the second and third floors, an opening of twenty by fourteen feet was made, around which was placed an iron railing, and above this, in the roof, is the sky light, in which it is proposed to place frosted and stained glass. In the southwest corner of the building there is a spacious iron stairway, with doors opening on each floor, and also opening into the adjoining three-story brick building, which was included in the purchase. The lower floor of this building, on the south of the theater, is to be used as a medical laboratory, the second story by the Surgeon General, and the third story by the attaches of his office. The first and second stories of the theater building will be occupied by the clerks of the Surgeon General's office, while the upper story will be used as the United States Army Medical Museum. The building on the north has also been fitted up, and will be assigned exclusively to the use of the photographers attached to the office. In this building a fine skylight has been erected, and the rooms have been fitted up in a very convenient manner for the purposes for which they are intended. In the upper story cases for the exhibition of the specimens of the museum are being rapidly fitted up, while on the other floors, book cases, desks, etc., are being made and put in place. When the Government took possession of the building, it was found that the front was insecure, and the Quartermaster General, after giving it an examination, ordered it to be torn down and rebuilt. The wall is surmounted by a handsome cornice, and the front is being laid off to imitate stone work. The entire building is supplied with water and gas, and is heated by steam apparatus. An immense amount of work has been done on it, and when complete it will be a fine building.—Forney's Press

The Plenary Council of the Roman Catholic Church, lately held at Baltimore, issued a Pastoral Letter to the Catholic clergy and laity of the United States, from which we make the following extract:

"For the children of the Church obedience to the civil power is not a submission to force which may not be resisted, nor merely the compliance with a condition for peace and security, but a religious duty founded on obedience to God, by whose authority the civil magistrate exercises his power. This power, however, as subordinate and delegated, must always be exercised agreeably to God's law. In prescribing anything contrary to that law the civil power transcends its authority and has no claim on the obedience of the citizen. Never can it be lawful to disobey God, as the apostles, Peter and John, so explicitly declared before the tribunal which sat in judgment on them: 'If it be just in the sight of God to hear you rather than God, judge ye.'"

Will that portion of the public press which for years has been reviling and denouncing all who have uttered sentiments which could by any artifice, be construed into an affirmance of the doctrine of "higher law," now also attack the Catholic Church for this authoritative and unequivocal declaration that the civil power, when it "prescribes anything contrary to God's law transcends its power and has no claim on the obedience of the citizen?"

New Mail Route.—The Walla Walla Statesman of the 7th inst., says:

The contractor, John Allman, has placed the new mail line between Missoula and Walla Walla in operation. The first mail was started out on Wednesday morning and will be continued regularly twice a week. The establishment of this mail route affords mail facilities to a number of settlements that heretofore have been without conveniences of this kind. Leaving Walla Walla we have a new post office at Wait's mill, W. N. Smith Postmaster. A post office has also been established at Tucanon, O. P. Platter, Postmaster; Spokane Bridge, Tim Lee Postmaster; Pend d'Oreille City, W. H. Pope Postmaster; Flathead, J. F. Hanks Postmaster; Cabinet Rapids, Missoula county, M. V. Koontz, Postmaster. The new post offices and postmasters have been designated by Mr. H. Bright, special agent of the Post Office Department, who has just passed over the route and superintended the inauguration of the line. For the present the mail will be packed through on horse, but with the coming spring it is the intention of the contractor to put on a new line of stages.

Confiscated Property.—A Washington dispatch of Dec. 5th states that it was the purpose of Senator Williams of Oregon to introduce in the Senate on that day the following resolution:

Resolved, That the Committee on Judiciary be instructed to make inquiry as to the power of the President to restore property, confiscated under the laws of the United States to its original owners, or if such power exists, to what extent it can rightfully be exercised under existing laws; and also to make inquiry into the power of the Secretary of the Treasury to deliver to private claimants therefor without judicial proceedings property seized by the United States as captured or abandoned during or since the late rebellion, and to report by bill or otherwise.

A correspondent says that there are 20,000 widows and 60,000 orphans in Alabama, many of whom are destitute.

Eastern News.—Late dispatches from the East have the following:

Major General Butler delivered an address November 24th at the Brooklyn Academy of Music on the wrongs and abuses of Executive power and the constitutional remedy. His main points were on the impeachment of Andrew Johnson. He charged him with misdemeanors which might be grouped under the head of intoxication, of making indecent and incendiary speeches intended to incite to hatred and fear the people of the United States; with usurping the powers of Congress; with the misappropriation of Government funds; with corruptly using the pardoning power; with appointing unlawfully men to office when knowing ... with neglecting to carry out the provisions of the Constitution; and with pardoning John T. Monroe that he might be Mayor of New Orleans and use his influence in interfering with the Louisiana State Convention and killing, assassinating and rioting, and murdering the members. He accompanied each of the charges with several specifications, and closed with a general anathema against the enemies of the country, in which he said: We ask nothing of those who have fought against the army of the United States. Neither do we ask them how we shall reconstruct the Government.

Kicking Out.—It was said in the hearing of a New Jersey Quaker lady that Johnson had threatened to kick out all officeholders who do not also hold to my policy. "But John," she inquired with delightful naivete. "But John, can he do it? Does thee think he can stand on one leg long enough to kick anybody?"

MOONOTYPES.—ELLSWORTH & CARDWELL, 69 First street, (Postoffice block,) are informed that Prof. Draper of New York has again succeeded in obtaining another photograph of the Moon. This remarkable occurrence exhibits one of the wonders of the art. While the most scientific men of the age are engaged in great photographic experiments the above gentlemen continue in the front rank as PICTURE-takers. Evidence of this can be seen at all hours, at their GALLERY.

THE CALIFORNIA MAIL.—Business men and the public in general are very much pleased that the mail between Portland and San Francisco during the winter months will be carried by steamer, which is a great convenience to the public and in many cases will be as great a benefit as it is to know that KOHN & FISHEL, at the ST. LOUIS STORE, receive their wares direct from manufacturers, and therefore are enabled to sell all kinds of clothing, Gents Shirts, Boots, and everything in their line at lower rates than can be purchased elsewhere.

MARRIED:

In this city, Dec. 10, by Rev. G. H. Atkinson, Mr. Richard Miller and Miss Emily H. Cooper, all of Multnomah county.

TELEGRAPHIC DESPATCHES AND REPORTERS GENERALLY.—We find the following in a late letter from the Portland correspondent of the San Francisco Bulletin. We wish to direct particular attention to the closing paragraph which states a fact, of the existence of which, the people, and especially the business men, of Oregon have long had good reason to complain:

"In the Bulletin of the the 6th inst., I read an editorial paragraph upon the appointment of Mr. Simonton, as General Agent of the Associated Press, in which occurs the following: '"It is understood that for several years past much matter of little importance to readers has been telegraphed at great expense to all portions of the Union. It has been the desire of newspaper publishers to improve telegraphic despatches—to strip them of useless verbiage, sending nothing but what would interest the public." The importance of this subject cannot be overestimated, and appears, as yet, to have been scarcely thought of. At this day, when first and often [illegible] are made solely through the agency of the telegraph, the persons who have the charge and control of these, control the public mind. The majority of people who read daily newspapers confine themselves mainly to local items and telegraphic despatches. Whoever manipulates, concocts or colors these, furnishes the mental pabulum of this large class of active and affirmative readers, and thereby gives tone and direction to their opinions and conduct—moral, social and political. Some one has said: "Let me make the songs of a people, and I care not who makes their laws." This was spoken at a time when the popular ballad or broadside, was the medium by which the people first learned the details of important events, and by which the memory and impression of them was embalmed and preserved in the popular heart. But now the telegraphic and local reporter, particularly the former, is the first to dress and garnish the events of the day, both great and small, and serve them up to their million readers, to be consumed and digested with their next morning's breakfast. Compared with the [illegible] and consequent influence—moral, esthetical and political—produced by these first harbingers of the fact, real or apparent, the able and carefully sifted leader or magazine article of a week or a month later, amount to almost nothing. There is a moral power in this, and it is always in the power of a reporter—local [illegible] to affect and prepossess our judgments [illegible] the moral quality of an act, by the choice of terms in which he chooses to narrate the fact, or in the mention of mitigating or aggravating incidents or circumstances little or nowise connected therewith. A murder may be modified into a homicide, or the reverse. The ugly features of a larceny may be softened and made much less repulsive by being tenderly characterized as a [illegible] or "appropriation," to the taker's own use. Practices which properly belong to the low category of swindles and cheats, are elevated into a kind of [illegible] respectability, by being reported as "operations."

Having the subject, it might not be amiss to say a word concerning the despatches between Oregon and California. What transpires in Oregon is scarcely ever known in the East through the telegraph—probably because Oregon events are not despatched to the California press, or it may be because Oregon is quietly ignored in the Pacific coast despatches which are made up in California and sent East. On the other hand, our Portland dailies take and publish lengthy despatches regularly from San Francisco. It is a heavy item of expense and a direct tax upon the reading community of this State. As a general thing, these despatches are a mess of gossip, that concerns or benefits scarcely any one. Time spent in reading them is time lost, and money paid for them is 'hard cash' wasted."

[illegible]—This paper has had, at various [illegible], something to say about the Chinese nuisance in Portland. It will continue the subject from time to time hereafter. It will be conceded that a few [illegible], in certain occupations, are found to be very [illegible], but if for that convenience the city must suffer a heavy tax upon its material prosperity, its morals, and its laws, the price paid will in the end be found rather too high. Portland has got the Chinaman disease in a worse form than most California towns will seem to have it. In that State, it rarely occurs that a single [illegible] is permitted to occupy either the heart of a town or any prominent quarter of it. Business interests as well as sanitary reasons forbid it; and they are only [illegible] out upon the outskirts, where they can carry on their beastly practices, smoke their opium and enjoy their own intolerable stenches without inflicting them upon the senses of white men and women. We [illegible] be extremely glad to see a disposition here to [illegible] thing. At present the greater part of the Chinese population of Portland is located in the very heart of the city. Here they carry on their pestilence-breeding occupations, in filthy dens, in practical defiance of sanitary ordinances. In such a location their temptations and means for the commission of crime are ten-fold greater than if they were located somewhere by themselves, away from the principal business parts of the city. [illegible] of the present term of the Circuit Court will [illegible] of what the Chinese population is costing Multnomah. There have been a large number [illegible] tried for one crime and another, occupying the time of the Court for not less than nine days already. Without saying anything of those cases in which the [illegible] has been discharged and in which the county has to pay the costs of trial, the time of the Court in Chinese trials at this term alone has cost more than $900, and if the approximate costs of [illegible], we will have not less than $1,500. This [illegible] go on increasing instead of diminishing, and [illegible] that it is a matter which calls for serious [illegible]. One prolific source of Chinese crime arises [illegible] among them of a system of slavery, [illegible] as the African system anywhere. [illegible] are bought and sold in Portland [illegible] dollars being sometimes paid for a slave of [illegible] grade, and as high as perhaps a thousand dollars [illegible] one. Quite a large proportion of the Chinese [illegible] are the slaves of men who compel them to [illegible] that degrading vocation for the enrichment of [illegible]. Men of money among them who [illegible], require them to produce a stated amount of [illegible] a stated period, and the fear of punishment [illegible] often induces the slave to resort to larceny [illegible] crimes. Our public authorities should see to it that the system be most thoroughly broken up.

[illegible].—Special Order No. 106, from the [illegible] of the Division of the Pacific, directs that [illegible] General George Crook, Lt.-Colonel 23d U. S. Infantry, will relieve Bt. Lt. Colonel Marshal of his command [illegible] Fort Boise District. Two expeditions against the [illegible] have recently been started from Camp Watson. The first [illegible] a few days since after following the [illegible] till [illegible] gave out. The second is now out with rations for thirty days......One company of the 8th U. S. Cavalry, left Camp Watson on Monday, the 3d, to [illegible] at Camp Lyon......First Lieut. A. H. Nickerson, 14th U. S. Infantry, is under orders to join his company at Fort Boise.

[illegible] TAXATION.—The assessed value of property in [illegible] county for 1864, was $4,331,930 on which there was paid a property tax of $12,995 79. In [illegible], the [illegible] valuation was $4,517,291, on which [illegible] amounted to $24,848 10. Multnomah has the largest [illegible] valuation of any county in the State [illegible], was the third county in population, Marion [illegible] by 1985 and Linn by 1323. The property [illegible] of Multnomah was last year greater than [illegible] by $1,572,663, and greater than Linn, by $2,-[illegible].

[illegible]—Notwithstanding the immense [illegible] taken by the Oriflamme yesterday, and the [illegible] to leave to-day, there is a large amount yet [illegible] in store—enough, it is said, to load two [illegible] which must wait for the Pacific and the return [illegible] and Montana. By that time freights [illegible] will have accumulated so as [illegible] grand jam.

[illegible]—The [illegible] freight list for [illegible], was 144 half bbls butter, 26 bbls, 45 [illegible], 3 kegs butter, 1800 sacks flour, 1 bale goods, [illegible], 47 sacks bacon, 43 cases lard, 20 sacks fruit, 3 [illegible], 182 boxes apples, 16 half bbls lard, and [illegible] goods. In the afternoon, the Alert [illegible], with 463 sacks flour, 562 boxes apples, 8 sacks [illegible], 3 bales goods and 1 box butter.

[illegible] CITY PAPER MILL.—This mill was supposed [illegible] to be in [illegible] lines to commence work, but upon trial, there were found some things in the machinery [illegible] which had to be altered, having been put up by persons who had not had sufficient experience in [illegible]. The required alterations may require a [illegible] two weeks, when it is hoped that [illegible] will be in trim for a successful start.

[illegible]. The Portland Iron Works has commenced the manufacture of Hale's patent gang plows. We learn that the proprietors have been in correspondence with Mr. Douthilt of Linn county, with a view to making an arrangement with him for the manufacture of [illegible] patent, should it be found superior, as is claimed, to [illegible] gang plows now in use.

A CASE OF CRIM. CON.—A man named Owen Prior [illegible] man were arrested last evening, [illegible] of the injured husband. They were found [illegible] at the Union Hotel, and lodged in the city jail. The case will probably be inquired into this morning before Judge Holman.

[illegible]. The late dry days have put the McAdam road between Portland and the White House, in [illegible] and again buggy-driving may be said [illegible]. The gay turn-outs don't go any poking, [illegible] pace, either, but, as Weller the elder would say, "[illegible] on the contrary quite the reverse."

[illegible].—There are at present in the city several prominent [illegible], among whom are Mr. Alvord, [illegible] of the Territory, Judge Kelly and Mr. James O'Neill, formerly of this city, and now Indian Agent at the Nez Perces Reservation.

[illegible].—The Fannie Troup did not arrive [illegible], till near 2 o'clock, having been detained at Springville, taking on wheat. After touching at her wharf, she dropped down and unloaded into the Montana.

[illegible].—The Walla Walla Statesman notes the arrival at that place, of a barrel of mountain trout, consigned to some lucky fellow in Portland. They were caught in the mountain streams near Fort Colville.

[illegible].—The Montana will leave this afternoon at 4 o'clock instead of 6, as advertised yesterday.

Barman Bros., all should know,
Are in the market shining;
Their Clothing sure is all to go,
And fairly worth our rhyming.

HOLIDAY PRESENTS.—WEIL BROS. have a large [illegible]—almost of fine dress goods—such as Moire [illegible], French and Irish poplins, etc.—which they are selling off at cost, affording an excellent opportunity for the purchase of HOLIDAY PRESENTS. They also offer, at cost, the choicest stock of custom-made clothing and Gents' furnishing goods.

STATE ITEMS.

The following officers of the People's Transportation Co. were elected on the 6th inst. to serve the ensuing year: A. A. McCully, President; Edwin N. Cooke, Vice President; Joseph Kelly, Geo. A. Pease and L. E. Pratt, Directors; S. T. Church, Secretary; George Marshall, Chief Engineer.

The following are the names of the officers elect of Multnomah Royal Arch Chapter, at Salem: Andrew McCulley, M. E. H. P.; Mells Stroud, E. K.; J. W. McAfee, E. S.; Geo. A. Edes, C. H.; B. F. Brown, P. S.; T. H. Cox, R. A. C.; Dan Murphy, G. M. 3d V.; J. J. Murphy, 2d V.; Jacob Conner, 1st V.; R. P. Earhart, Secretary; John F. Miller, Treasurer; James Smart, Sentinel.

The following are the names of the officers elected at the municipal election held in Salem last Monday: Mayor, John H. Moores; Recorder, L. P. Willis; Marshal, J. N. Matheny; Treasurer, Charles Uzafovage. Aldermen—1st Ward, O. J. Carr, Jos. Hoyt; 2d Ward, Joseph Holman, A. J. Brown; 3d Ward, John F. Miller, J. J. Shaw; 4th Ward, S. A. Clark, J. G. Brown.

The Unionist notices the fact that the convicts in the State Penitentiary are unsupplied with reading matter, except four or five greasy backed Bibles and about the same number of hymn books, and calls on those who are disposed to exercise Christian charity to supply this want. Here, certainly, is an opportunity for a little genuine philanthropy.

The Penitentiary, says the Unionist, is now in a much improved condition, compared with what it was prior to the installation of Major Berry, the present Superintendent. Under his supervision many improvements have been added to the building as formerly designed. An addition has been built to the west end of the main building, composed of eight inch lumber, laid one plank upon another and spiked together, making a very strong wall. The cells where the prisoners sleep are as secure as they could be made of wood and iron fastenings. Maj. Berry has adopted a new and novel plan for bolting all the cell doors at once. It is done by means of levers so attached to long iron bars extending along the wall above the doors of each tier of cells, that all that is necessary to bolt them securely is to spring the lever, which is easily done with one hand. The cooking and eating departments are equally well adapted to the purposes for which they are designed, combing convenience, neatness and security. The prisoners appear to both fear and respect their officers, and the best of discipline seems to prevail.

Mr. Oppenheimer, just down from Colville, furnishes us the following in relation to the Big Bend mines. The last season has been particularly unfavorable to mining operations, and hence results are less favorable than was expected. On French Creek, which is regarded as the richest locality yet struck, it is estimated that $100,000 was taken out in the course of the summer. McCullough's Creek, it is thought, yielded an equal amount. Mining was carried on in a number of other creeks, but with what results is not known. It is fair to estimate the total yield of the mines for the season just closed at $250,000. From eighty to ninety persons will winter at Big Bend. Many of these are confident that with another and more favorable season, these mines will show a large yield of gold. Messrs. Ferguson & Co. have a large stock of goods in the mines. The Hudson Bay Company also have a trading post at Big Bend, and do considerable trading with the miners. In summing up, it is fair to say that the Big Bend country has by no means realized expectations, and yet the "prospects" obtained, warrant the belief that the mines will yet rank among the most productive in the Northern country.—W. W. Statesman.

"How do you like the character of St. Paul?" asked a person of his landlady one day. "Ah, he was a good, clever old soul, I know, for he once said, you know, that we must eat what is set before us and ask no questions, for conscience sake. I always thought I should like him for a boarder."

STOP THAT COUGHING
SOME OF YOU CAN'T, AND WE PITY you. You have tried every remedy but the ONE destined, by its intrinsic merit, to supersede all similar preparations. It is not surprising you should be reluctant to try something else after the many experiments you have made of trashy compounds foisted on the public as a certain cure; but
Pulmonary Syrup
is really the VERY BEST remedy ever compounded for the cure of Coughs, Colds, Sore Throat, Asthma, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis and Consumption. Thousands of people in California and Oregon have been already benefitted by the surprising curative powers of
Pulmonary Syrup
and with one accord give it their unqualified approbation. We now address ourselves to all who are unacquainted with this, the greatest Panacea of the age, for the healing of all diseases of the Throat and Lungs, assuring you that has cured thousands and it will cure YOU if you try it.
NEWELL'S
This invaluable medicine is pleasant to the taste; soothing, healing and strengthening in its effects, entirely free from all poisonous or deleterious drugs, and perfectly harmless under all circumstances.
Certificates from many prominent citizens of San Francisco accompany every bottle of

G. VENARD,
CHARTRES COFFEE!
Manufactory Established in June, 1851.
STEAM POWER, NOS. 625 AND 627 FRONT ST.
HAS CONSTANTLY ON HAND GROUND AND ROASTED COFFEE, GREEN COFFEE of the best qualities. CREAM OF TARTAR and SPICES of all sorts.
The undersigned, who has always enjoyed public confidence for the excellent quality of his Coffee, neglects nothing to justify the good name acquired by his productions, the sale of which daily increases. The acknowledged superiority of his merchandise, which commands here, and in the markets of the interior, a relatively higher price, excites the cupidity of some manufacturers, and every day he sees increasing the number of those who, by counterfeit or imitation of his mark, seek to deceive the public, palming upon them their inferior productions for the genuine G. VENARD CHARTRES COFFEE. This fraud can deceive nobody after a trial, but only adds to the favorable opinion of the consumers, the very flattering though unwilling testimony of the counterfeiters. Nevertheless, buyers should be forewarned, and placed on their guard against this practice.
BEWARE OF COUNTERFEITS.

In the Dark.

BY CHARLES DICKENS.

I wouldn't have been Robinson Crusoe, not for five hundred a year and no slack. It's all werry well being your own foreman and master, and so on, but then such a life to my mind's like a well-flagged deal board just made ready for flooring. You've been over it, and touched it well down with your jack-plane, and finished off with your trying-plane and there it is—or ought to be, if it ain't—scamped just like a bit o' satin, every knot just like a smooth brown eye, and every bit o' grain standing out as if polished; but then turn it over, and it's all as rough, and shaggy, and splintery as can be. It's all werry well being master and guager, but then you has to be journeyman, and laborer into the bargain. But that ain't it so much, for I wouldn't give a clout nail, let alone tup-pence, for a feller as can't turn his hand to anything in a push; it is the lonesomeness of the thing.

I expect its not liking to be alone made me get married; and I must say that now there's an old bird at home and five little ones in the nest, I ain't werry lonesome there. How they do open their precious young beaks, and what a sight o' stuff it does take afore you can persuade 'em to shut again! But I ain't grumbling about that, mind, and I hope I never shall. However, as I said afore, I don't like being alone, for it puts me in mind of a werry lonely time; but I do like having a mate come in for an hour's chat, and join me over a pipe and a pint of half-and-half in a quiet and sociable manner, the same as you have to-night, Dick Smith.

That's a good trying-plane o' yours—the one you had in the shop to-day—but I never did see, and don't suppose I ever shall see, such a tool as one I lost about four years ago—least ways I didn't lose it, for I sold it, but it was a loss for all that. Fine sound bit o' beach as ever you saw; while as to the iron, there was never a better bar o' stuff came out o' Sheffield. Just show it the lestand now and then, and knock it up to the right set and then—whish! whish!—the shavings would seem to run off a board as fine, and then, and then, as soft as—as—well as shavings, you know.

I sold that plane for two shillings, and the next day I'd have given five to get it back, but it' was gone again, and I have never set eyes on it since. You see, nothing looks worse than for a man to be parting with his tools; and when you see a fellow doing of it, he's either one as isn't worth his salt, or else he's worry hard drove.

Now I suppose I do make my salt, mostlings, or else I shouldn't have been two years in this shop; but about the time I told you of I was going to part with one of my tools, so you may suppose I was hard drove. It don't matter where it was, but it wern't a hundred miles from Gray's Inn Lane; got my order to be off with a lot more down into Surrey, where there was a cottage army, as they calls it, a building.

I slips off out o' the lane and across Holborn in no time; and in less than that I was down our court where we lodged, and up two pair o' stairs, and into the room before my wife had time to hide what she was doing of.

"Hooray, mother," I says, "took on I and then stops short; for though I would not let her think I know she had been having a good cry, it all at once struck me that I should be setting her off again, for I'd engaged to go down into the country for a month certain, and I should have to leave her behind; so I stops short.

"Oh father," she says, "I am thankful, for I don't know what could have gone next."

We had, somehow, then, got into the way of callin' ourselves "Mother" and "Father"; and so she said she didn' know what could have gone next; and I'm sure I couldn't have told her for a many of our things had gone away about that time; for what with no work and a long spell or two o' sick was we had to make a good many visits to a certain relative, as I am sure every hard-working man hates the name of.

And now I ain't speakin' fair, for I said we had to make a good many visits; but it worn't we, for I'm blest if I wasn't such a coward myself that I daren't go, but I stopped sneaking at home and let the wife go instead, which worn't at all manly, say you; no more it worn't.

Howsomever, when she said that I knew that, something must go; and I felt so light-hearted with the idea o' that work that I made up my mind to go myself, and wrapping my old favorite plane up in a red handkercher, I slips out into Fetter Lane where our Uncle lived. Off I goes, full swing, as if it was all right, and with my mind made up to run right in and pawn the plane and then let missus have the money, and make shifts till I could send her some more; and, then what with thinking about having to tell her I was going into the country, and about how soon the foreman would let me draw something on account if I didn't shoot right past the shop.

"Don't turn back yet," I says to myself, "or people will think there's something wrong." So I walks right on, and gets into Farrington Market, and made a bit of a twist, and comes back again, meaning not to miss it this time.

There it was—three golden balls hung out, and a window full of everything one could find a name for; workingmen's tools and watches, silk handkerchiefs and silver spoons, flutes, and fiddles without any strings, pistols and telescopes—the one to make a hole in you, and t'other to look at it with—glass decanters and tooth-drawers, pincers, rings, chains, ear-rings and musical boxes, and composing sticks; but there wasn't neither a smoothing, nor a rebate, nor a molding, nor a jack, not a trying plane in the whole window; and I cut by as hard as ever I could; and, "Tom Scott," I says, "you're a fool! you've come to the wrong shop."

All at once I pulled up, and pretended to be looking at the fishing-tackle shop, and stood there a-talking, as it were, to an old stuffed jack that was a-staring at me with his yellow eyes and his mouth wide open and full of hookey teeth, that would let anything go in but precious little come out again; and then, somehow or another, it seemed to me as if that great stuffed jack, or pike, or whatever you call it, was a sorter imitation o' that precious relation as I came out on purpose to see.

"Ah!" says I, "and we poor chaps is the gudgeon as he lives on. And a precious gudgeon you are, Tom Scott—six feet high, fourteen stone weight, and humbugging yourself and pretending all sorts o' gammon, because you ain't got enough stuff in you to go in like a man to pawn that plane. Tom," I says, "I'm ashamed of you! Take it home again, and ask the missus to do it for you, and don't be a humbug and say you got to the wrong shop."

And so I gave it to him—that's me, you know—hot and strong for about five minutes, and then I felt better.

"Don't be a donkey," I says; and then I hugs the plane up tight, and walks on; but I'm blessed if everybody don't seem to know where I was a goin', and kep' staring at the red handkercher, when they wouldn't have took a bit o' notice if I had carried the plane in my hand, open like.

"Now for it," says I; for I'd made my mind quite up, and meant business, when I meet a policeman and he looks at me, and I looks at him; I don't know how a chap feels that has stolen a plane, but if he feels half as bad as I did that afternoon, why, the sooner he turns honest and earns the tool instead, the better for him.

I knew I was a fool to mind, and kep telling myself so; but wasn't no use, bless you; for before I'd got a dozen yards past the policeman, if I didn't turn round to look; and, as a matter of course, there was he turned round, too, and staring at me. Talk about a look! why, his eyes went through me like a mortice chisel in a door jamb!

I turns round again and shuffles on meaning to rush into the shop. "Now for it," I says again; and I believe I should have done it, if a chap hadn't come out at the same moment, with his hand in his pocket chinking some money, and we nearly run against one another, and started back, for he knowed me by sight, and I knowed him, through having worked a few benches off one another up at Cubitt's.

We just nods, and he has gone like a shot for he knowed I could tell what he had been in there for, while, of course, I put it to you, now, I couldn't go in then, could I! On I goes over so far up the lane, and then back once more, and this time, although I knowed everybody was looking at me I blunders right into the shop, slides off the handkercher, and bangs the plane down on the counter.

"Lend me five shillings on this for a week," I says: and two or three people in cupboards like, reaches round to see who made such a noise; but as there was four or five more people in the place, nobody takes any more notice of me, and there I stands, hot and savage, till a skinny little chap with a penholder across his mouth, like a bit, because he was vicious, comes up and turns my old plane over, and then he mumbles as well as he could for the pen—

"How much?"

"Twelve and six," I says, for I thought he meant what did I give for the plane.

He gives it a push and shakes his head, and I was just going to speak, when I felt a hand on my shoulder, and looking round, there was the policeman I met, and he says:

"Where did you get it from, my man?"

"Bought it," says I; in a regular flurry.

"Where?" says he.

"Charing Cross," I says; and, to make a long story short, I had to let him walk back to my lodging with me, and see my basket of tools, and then he only seemed half satisfied; while half an hour after I roused up and went out, quite savage, swinging the plain in my hand, and sold it at a marine store shop for two shillings.

It was hard work to comfort the wife when she knew that she was going to be left alone; for "Oh, Tom," she says, "the poverty's hard enough to bear without having to be separated." But I promised her I'd take a lodging and get her down with me as soon as I found the work likely to last; but next morning at breakfast I saw more than one tear drop from her teacup.

But it was a bright morning, and I'd been doing all I could to cheer her up; for I wasn't going to start till nine; so I took young Tom and washed his head for him, and rubbed on the soap till his little nob was all white.

"Now sloosh faryer," he says; and I slooshed him, and I never got the soap once in his eyes, nor yet up his nose, which wasn't surprising, seeing what a chap he was then, and no nose at all to speak of.

Well, at last I had my tool basket ready, and a hammer through the handles to swing it over my shoulder. There were three clean aprons inside, and some odds and ends I should want; and then there was nothing else to do but to say good-bye. But there! I won't tell you about it, for she took on a great deal, as it was the first time I had been away from her.

"You will write to Tom?" says she.

"Why, of course," I says.

"And I've put four sheets and some envelopes in," she says, "so that you needn't write on the back of the sandpaper with your pencil, for it's so hard to make out."

And then, after five minutes' silence, I bolted out, and wouldn't look behind till I was out of the court.

Why, of course I was sorry to leave her behind; and I went along with my heart feeling as heavy as a lump of lead, and everybody I met looking dull and weary, which I should think must have been indigestion, or something of that kind, but it soon went off, and the clear sunshine morning seemed to brighten one up till I felt so hearty and cheery that I was ashamed of myself, for I felt as though I ought to be miserable, like I knew the wife was at home. But there we were, several of us, along with carts full of scaffold-poles and material, and before long we were out in the open country.

Out in the open country—God bless it!—with the birds twittering in the trees and hedges; the blue sky overhead, with now and then a light cloud slowly sailing across; the soft wind smelling that delicious, that we opened our mouths and drew in great long breaths, as though we should never be tired. There were flowers everywhere—lilac, laburnum, and may; orchards full of blinky apple blossoms; while as to the fields in the golden sunshine, ah! it was a sight to men who had been cooped up in close London courts, without knowledge where the next day's bread was to come from!

Out in the open country, with fresh beauties at every turn! Why, we are like so many boys, running by the carts, larking, shouting and making regular fools of ourselves, which must, of course, have been owing to the light, free air. I've heard talk of prisoners and sick men, and their delight at being out once more; but they could not have felt happier than we did, out in the open country, on that bright May day.

Every now and then, though, something dull would come over me, and I wasn't sorry when it did; for what business had I to be so happy and cheerful, knowing how miserable I had left some one at home! But so it was; and the bit of blackness wore off, and I was as lively as the best of them five minutes after; for mind you, it isn't money as can give the real gladness of heart.

Well, we got down to the place, and the work went on merrily. The foreman was a good fellow, and made me one or two little advances; and as there seemed to be work for a good three or four months, I began to look out for a little place where I could bring some one down to; and a comfortable lodging I soon found, made all my little arrangements, and sent up a letter with a post-office order inside, so that some one and the two little ones could come down comfortably the next day but one.

Every one, I dare say, has his own fancies; I don't mind telling you one o' mine. I do not know any one thing so satisfactory as driving a nail home. You make a small hole with your awl, in goes your nail, and then, tapping gently at first, you go on by degrees, until the head gets nearer and nearer, and at last is driven into the soft deal board.

Not much of it! says you. Perhaps not to your way of thinking; but every man to his trade; you may depend on it, in every trade there's a similar feeling. I've seen blacksmiths laugh as they pounded away at their iron; the old cobblers grin as they drew their wax-end tight; the painters wag their heads as they laid on the flatting and something o' the same kind in most trades; and it is only reasonable that it should be so, for a fellow would not be much of a workman if he didn't love his craft. Well, I was busy driving the nails in a piece o' boarding, thinking all the time about the missus coming down, when I makes a false stroke, hit the nail on one side, and it flew up and hit me in the eye.

Talk about agony! No one knows what I suffered for a short time. The inflammation spread from one eye to the other, and I was quite blind, so that I had to be led home to my lodging. Perhaps you know what a bit of dust or a lash, or anything of that kind is in your eye; you know the pain and worrying it gives you; so you can think what I suffered—a great, tall, stout fellow—as I lay turning about, with the sweat dropping off me.

Doctor came, and did all he could. Next day came, and the pain seemed easier. Next day after that came, and a letter saying my wife would not be there for another day, and some one had to read it to me, for everything was as black as night; and at last, worn out with lonesomeness, and the horrid fear that I was to be a blind, helpless man, I turned over upon my face and wept there till the pillow was quite wet.

Yes, I know it was the act of a child; but I felt like one then, as I thought of the bright light of God, sunshine gone from me forever; that I should gaze no more upon the loving face of my own wife, and that the merry, bright eyes of my little ones would sparkle no more for me; that I should henceforth grope about in the dark, seeking, like the sorcerer in the Testament, for some one to lead by the hand. That I, the great man of bone and muscle, should be in a moment stricken down helpless, to be henceforth a burden to my poor wife, and we were poor people.

"In the dark, in the dark!" I kept on groaning to myself as I lay, and then I thought of the past time, and of how great a blessing I had thoughtlessly enjoyed, and then the thought came to me of other blessings which never seemed blessings before, for being mostly short o' money, I always thought myself hard used, and growled more than I need have done. And at last, of thinking and suffering, my head seemingly grew hot, and I turned delirious—half mad, you know—and went on terribly, I suppose, till two days after, when I seemed to wake up in the dark, and lay still, thinking and wondering where I was, till I heard a noise as of some moaning, and I calls out, "Who's there?" I knew who it was directly, for I just heard the word "Tom" sobbed out, and then there was an arm under my head, and tears falling upon my poor sightless face, and such tender, hopeful words whispering to me as made my heart swell and beat, and I felt that, come what might—come sickness, come sorrow, blind or able to see—I had some one to lean on, and to lead me by the hand.

We were very quiet then, and I lay on my side trying to look through the black darkness for that dear old face that I could feel close by me, as some one kneeled down by my bedside; but no, I could not see it with my eyes, though I could with my heart. And then she stopped sobbing, and talked of hoping for the best, and of how the eyes of the blind had been opened, and that perhaps my affliction might, by His help, yet be removed. And so we walked and talked, and she said we would sorrow no more about it, and then how much she could get by needle work, and all so hopefully, that I seemed to brighten up, but only for a few moments, for I knew what a dead, helpless burden I should be. And then she must have seen my face working, and, poor lass! she broke down herself, when I said she had better been left a widder.

At last, in the quiet o' that room, not a sound to be heard but the twittering o' the birds outside the window, I said, in better hope, some words with her, as she knelt by me, but we got no further than "Thy will be done."

Dick Smith, I never knowed how much love and tenderness and gentleness there was in this world until I groped about in the dark. I'd been bitter, as many a disappointed working-man, and railed at my betters, but now, in the midst of my trouble, I learnt that I had walked all my life in the dark, stumbling about and not seeing the blessings that were spread around me. We never knew want during that dark month which we spent in that pleasant country place, where my wife led me about among the sweet spring flowers, while everybody had a kind and loving word for me. The governor allowed me half wages, and somebody did needle work, and they used to pay her double and treble, and send me all sorts of things, so that we were very well off. Then the doctor came every day, and told me I wasn't to fret about it, for he hoped I should get my sight yet.

One day I sat trembling in my chair, with the doctor, operating—not trembling at the pain, but for fear I might have been deceived; somebody stood there, too, holding my hands, for she had got leave to be present. All at once there was a bright flush of lights, and then I felt my head swim, and I fainted dead away, for I could not stand up against the swelling joy that burst upon me.

As keen a pair of eyes, as ready a pair of hands, and as willing and hopeful a heart as I hope are to be found in any workshops in England, Dick Smith; and I'm a humble and thankful man for it. But, Lord bless you, I has my bit of ill temper when things goes three-cornered; and then Patty comes and whispers—God save her—in my ear, when the sun shines again, and I think of old times before my accident, and say to her:

"Eyes shut, Patty. I was in the dark!"

DR. G. W. BROWN

HAS located in Portland in CARTER'S NEW BUILDING, for the permanent cure of all private diseases, such as syphilis, gonorrhea, gleet, strictures &c. He also calls the attention of those suffering with to call at his office and be at once restored. Surgical operations SKILLFULLY performed on the EYES for film, cataract, strabismus or cross eyes.

Below are some of the many testimonials:

This is to certify that I, John B. Jodwan, was blind for over nine years, and I tried all means of a cure, and and many doctors, and all of no effect, and I spent all the means I had. Finally, I had to become a county charge, and when I was taken to Dr. G. W. Brown, and stated my case to him, and misfortune, he at once commenced to treat my eyes, and now I am well, and commend all those that are suffering with diseases of the eyes to call on Dr. G. W. Brown. The reason why I do this is to let suffering humanity know where they can be cured.

SATURDAY, Feb. 10, 1866.

This is to certify that my daughter was almost blind for over seven years, and was doctored by other physicians without obtaining any relief, when finally I took her to Dr. G. W. Brown, who examined her case, and at once began to give her treatment, and her sight has been entirely restored. I do this to let those who are suffering with diseases of the eyes know where they can obtain a cure. It has been three years since her eyes were cured, and they are yet sound.
THOMAS LIVINGSTON,
Deer Creek Precinct, Douglas county, Oregon.
SALEM, July 21, 1866.

This is to certify that I was blind for over four months, and almost blind for one year and a half; I tried several eye doctors but received no benefit; I had almost given my case up as hopeless when fortunately I heard of Dr. G. W. Brown, now of Salem. I was induced to try him; he performed a surgical operation on my eyes, and gave me treatment. I soon began to recover, and in a short time I was perfectly cured. I do this in justice to one who rescued me from a fate worse than death, and also for the benefit of those who are laboring under similar afflictions that they may know where they can get relief. It is now about eight months since my eyes were cured and they still remain good. I can see to read the finest print without difficulty, and my eyes can bear the strongest light without pain.

To Soldiers Claiming Bounties

UNDER THE

EQUALIZATION BOUNTY BILL!

THE UNDERSIGNED, HAVING RECENTLY RETURNED from Washington City, where he has made the proper arrangements for the collections of the Extra Bounty of $100 allowed to all soldiers enlisted after the 19th day of April, 1861, for a period of not less than three years, and $50 for soldiers enlisted for a period of not less than two years.

Persons entitled to the benefits of said Bounty will find it to their interest to attend to its collection at once. Having an Agent at Washington and personal knowledge of the mode of making collections through the Departments, I can get returns promptly.

☞ Call with your Discharge, and two witnesses for Identification, at the Publication Office of the Daily Oregonian, No. 5 Washington St., Portland.

A. BUSHWILER, Claim Agent.

RULES AND REGULATIONS FOR THE PAYMENT OF BOUNTIES, UNDER THE ACT TO EQUALIZE BOUNTIES, APPROVED JULY 28, 1866.

WAR DEPARTMENT, ADJUTANT GENERAL'S OFFICE,
WASHINGTON, September 16, 1866.

1. All applications shall be filed within the period of six months, from the 1st day of October, 1866, and before any payments are made, shall be classified by regiments, battalions, or other separate organizations, and no application filed after that period shall be settled until after the former shall have been paid.

2. No application shall be entertained unless accompanied by the original discharge of the soldier and the affidavit required by the fourteenth section of the Act, and the further affidavit that he has not received, nor is he entitled to receive from the United States, under any laws or regulations prior to the Act of July 28, 1866, more than $100 bounty for any and all military service rendered by him during the late rebellion, over and above the amount therein claimed.

3. All applications for the additional bounty authorized by this Act from surviving soldiers shall be in the form hereinafter prescribed, and the evidence of identity shall be the same as is now required, and applications from the heirs of deceased soldiers shall be in the form now required by the Treasury Department.

4. As soon as the examination of the claims of any regiment, or other independent organization, shall have been properly acted upon the Paymaster General shall take the necessary steps for their prompt payment.

5. A register shall be kept in the Paymaster General's office, and also in the office of the Second Auditor, of all claims presented under the law, in which the claimants will be classified by regiments, etc. If the claims be allowed, the amount of bounty paid to each will be noted, and if rejected the cause of rejection will be distinctly stated.

6. In the applications for bounty, as required by the third of these rules, the affidavit shall state each and every period of service rendered by the claimant, and also that he never served otherwise than as herein stated.

7. Organizations irregularly in the service of the United States, or called out for special purposes, as State Militia, Home Guards, etc., and not included in the general bounty laws, are not included within the meaning of the Act.

8. Soldiers enlisted for "three years or during the war," who were discharged by reason of the termination of the war, shall be considered as having served out the period of their enlistment, and are entitled to bounty under this Act.

9. The minority of heirs, claimants for bounty under this Act, must be proven to have existed at the date of its passage. Parents shall receive jointly the bounty to which they may be entitled as heirs, unless the father has abandoned the support of his family, in which case it shall be paid to the mother. Non-residence in the United States shall not be a bar to the claim of heirs, who would otherwise legally inherit.

The provisions of the Act exclude from its benefits the following classes:

1. Those who, after serving the full period of their enlistment, were dishonorably discharged at its expiration.

2. Those discharged during enlistment by way of favor or punishment.

3. Those discharged on account of disability contracted in the service, but not occasioned by wounds received "in the line of duty," who shall not have previously served two or three years respectively at the time of discharge.

4. Those discharged on account of disability existing at the time of their enlistment.

5. The heirs of those who have died since their discharge of wounds or disease not contracted in the service and in the line of duty.

6. The surviving soldiers and heirs of deceased soldiers who, under previous laws, have received or are entitled to receive a bounty of more than $100 from the United States.

7. The surviving soldiers, as well as the heirs of deceased soldiers, when such soldiers have bartered, sold, assigned, loaned, transferred, exchanged or given away their final discharge papers, or any interest in the bounty provided by this or any other Act of Congress.

8. The Act of the 28th of July, 1866 creates no right of inheritance beyond those vested by the law under which these heirs received or were entitled to receive the original bounty, and debars certain classes, brothers and sisters of heirs that were entitled to receive the original bounty, from any claim for the additional bounty provided by this Act.

Respectfully referred to the Attorney General for his opinion on the point whether the rules and regulations as within amended are in conformity with law.

EDWIN M. STANTON,
September 14, 1866. Secretary of War.

I have examined these amended regulations, and am of opinion they are in conformity with law.

HENRY STANBERY,

TO THE UNFORTUNATE.

NEW REMEDIES, NEW REMEDIES

Dr. Gibbon's Dispensary,

617 KEARNEY STREET, NEAR COMMERCIAL, San Francisco. Established in 1854, for the treatment of Sexual and Seminal Diseases, such as Gonorrhea, Gleet, Stricture, Syphilis in all its forms, Seminal Weakness, Impotency, etc. Skin Diseases (of years standing) and Ulcerated Legs successfully treated.

Horrible Diseases.

How many thousands of persons, both male and female, are there who are suffering out a miserable existence from the effects of secret indulgences, or from virus absorbed into the system! Look at their pallid, emaciated and disfigured faces and their broken-down constitutions, disqualifying them for the happiness of marriage or the enjoyment of life. In this horrid situation thousands suffer until death closes the scene. Let parents, guardians, friends, attend to those who are suffering with any of these horrible life-destroying maladies, see that they are cared for and cured before it be too late. Send them immediately to Doctor Gibbon, a physician who has made private disease his especial study for years, and who is certain to cure the most inveterate cases without mercury or any injurious drugs. It is important to those who are afflicted, or to those who are interested in the welfare of their friends, to be careful of the many pretended doctors who infest all cities, publishing their skill in curing all diseases in a few days, imposing upon the public by using the names of eminent physicians from Europe and other places. Be therefore careful and make strict inquiry, or you may fall into the hands of these charlatans.

Seminal Weakness.

Seminal Emissions, the consequence of self-abuse, this solitary vice, or depraved sexual indulgence, is [illegible] by the youth of both sexes to an almost [illegible] producing, with unerring certainty, the following train of morbid symptoms, unless combatted by scientific medical measures, viz: Sallow countenance, dark spots under the eyes, pain in the head, ringing in the ears, noise like the rustling of leaves and rattling of chariots, [illegible] about the loins, weakness of the limbs, confused vision, blunted intellect, loss of confidence, [illegible] in approaching strangers, a dislike to form new acquaintances, a disposition to shun society, loss of memory, hectic flushes, pimples and various eruptions about the face, furred tongue, feted breath, coughs, [illegible] sweats, monomania and frequent insanity. If relief is not obtained, should apply immediately, either in person or by letter, and have a cure effected by his new and entirely mode of treating this disease, which never fails of effecting a quick and radical cure. Dr. G. will give One Hundred Dollars to any person who will prove satisfactorily to him that he was cured of this complaint by any other of the San Francisco quacks.

DOCTOR GIBBON is responsible, and will give to each patient a written instrument, binding him to effect a radical and permanent cure, or no charge.

Persons at a distance may be CURED AT HOME, by addressing a letter to Doctor Gibbon, stating case, symptoms, length of time the disease has continued, and have medicines promptly forwarded, free from damage and curiosity, to any part of the country, with full and plain directions for use, for Ten Dollars, sent in a registered letter or through Wells, Fargo & Co.
